

Thus, Spoke Zarathustra!

"I see it all now", said the blind man
"Oh, that's good to hear", said the person who was deaf
"It makes a lot of sense", said the fool
"I'll remember that", said the old lady with dementia
"It makes me restless", says the comatose
"That makes me sad", said the comedian
"It will make me walk my talk", said the crippled man, honestly

"It makes me want to eat my words", says the chef
"It's all lies", says the politician, "and I should know"
"That is as clear as mud", said the cynic
"I could sell this for a million dollars", says the entrepreneur
"I'll plough it into my land", said the farmer, "and it will grow"
"I can really fly with this", says the aviator
"It touches the depths of my soul", said the deep-sea diver, ponderously

"But it's as clear as day", says the knight
"It's definitely the Truth", said the liar
"I can really understand you now", says the alienist
"You can't fool me", said the conjurer
"It's the voice of the Almighty", says the atheist
"It's a fantasy", said the novelist
"I want to get up and go", said the cripple, restlessly

"It puts everything into order", said the anarchist, pulling out his gun
"I am now at peace", says the warrior, standing guard
"It frightens me", said the hero, trembling
"It's pure Greek to me", says the man from Rhodes
"No, he is speaking in Swahili", said the Bantu
"But it's all nonsense", says the sage, trying to make a pun
"It's what we all wanted to hear", said the propagandist, complacently

"I'll fight it to my last breath", said the peacemaker
"It's a wonderful prayer", says the priest
"It will enslave you", said the gang-master
"I am innocent", says the convicted criminal
"I feel free now", said the slave
"This is serious stuff", says the clown, who just wants people to have fun
"I'll give everything I possess to charity", said the banker, somewhat mendaciously

But the Prophet had not said a single word!
